The New York Times

Big Buildings Hurt the Climate. New York City Hopes to Change That.

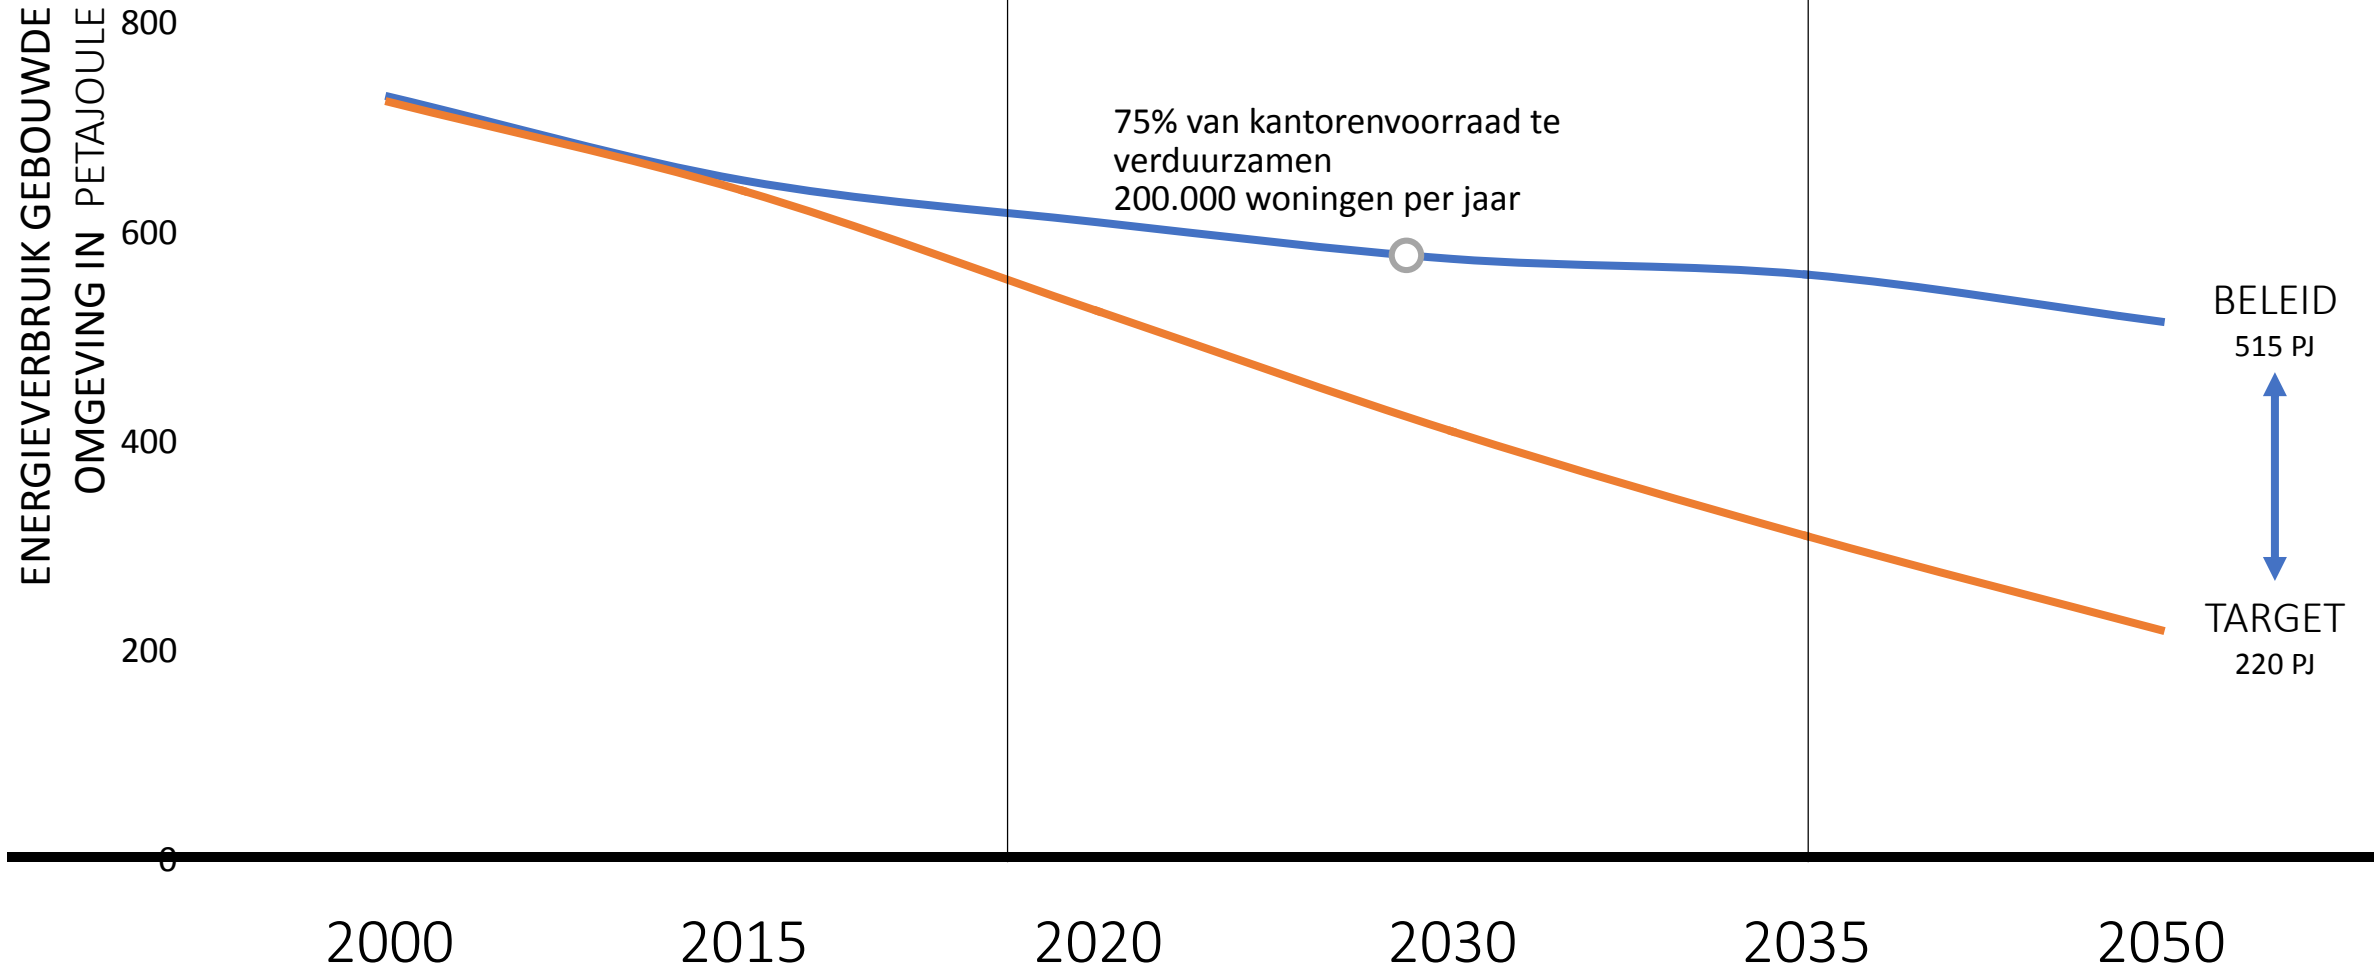

To fight climate change, the city is forcing the buildings, like the Empire State Building and Trump Tower, to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Het risico als we niet handelen

DE VRAAG IS NIET “WIE GAAT HET BETALEN?” ...

MAAR: “WIE GAAT HET
BETALEN ALS WE HET
NIET DOEN?” ...

To disrupt, or be disrupted

The collage features several overlapping elements:

- Top Left: A news article snippet with the headline "Pressure Builds On CEOs To Navigate Climate Action: It's A New Reality For Corporate America." by Tom Murray, Contributor Environmental Defense Fund. It includes a logo and the text "I write about the new frontier for corporate sustainability leadership".
- Top Center: A snippet from the New York Times with the headline "Union Workers Push for Action, Including... to Big Oil".
- Top Right: A screenshot of the website "Duurzaam Gebouwd" (Het integrale platform) with a search bar and navigation menu. Below it is an article titled "Duurzame transformatie met Groenfinanciering" with a "17x gedeeld" (17x shared) badge.
- Middle Left: A snippet from a website with the headline "APG goes green for private equity top ups" and sub-headline "Influential European pensions manager wants ESG to inform its decision-making on future private equity investments". It is by FN Staff, dated March 16, 2017.
- Middle Right: A screenshot of the PGGM website with the headline "Invest in your BlackRock's L... n Notice" and a sub-headline "PFZW halves the CO2 footprint of its investments". It features a portrait of a man and the text "Stronger focus on sustainability protects pension savings".
- Bottom Left: A snippet with the headline "Retailer to test idea of renting office furniture - but home products could be next" by Sarah Butler.
- Bottom Center: A small image of a laptop displaying a starry night sky.
